Eastern Nazarene College

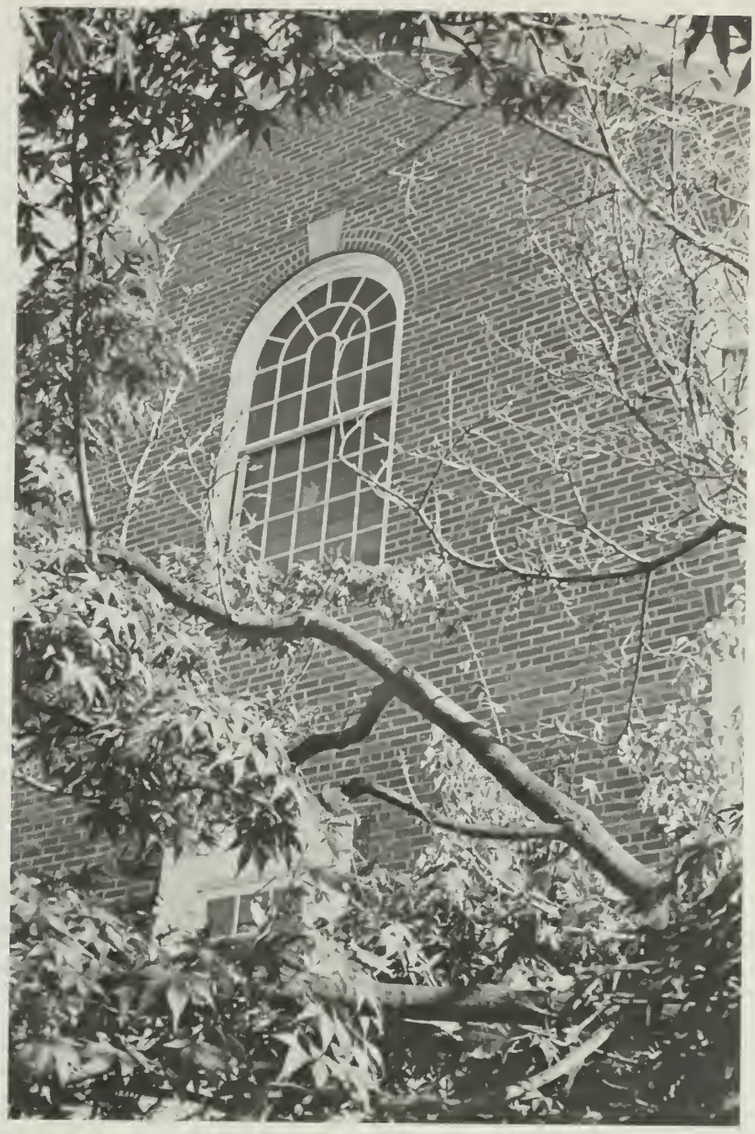
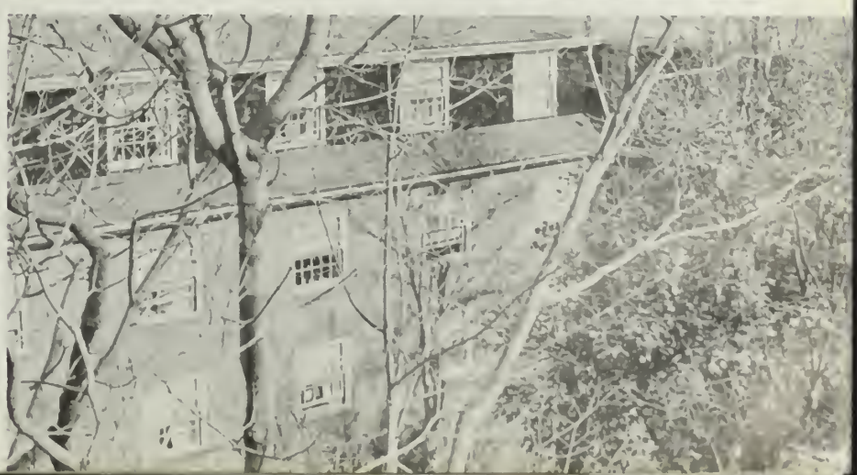
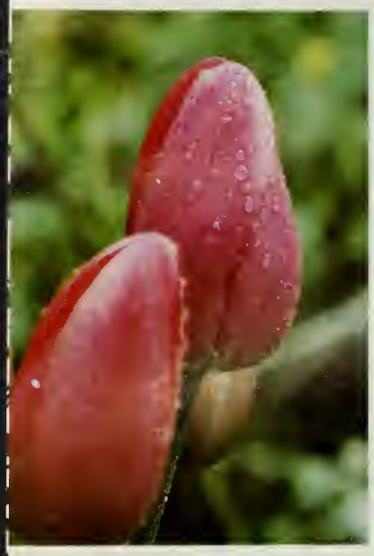
What is it? What does it stand for? What does it mean to its students? How is it held in the memory of its Alumni? How is it viewed by its community? What impact does it have on its surrounding?

Does the spirit make the difference? Is there a difference? I think so.

Buildings, Buildings nobly stating a tradition. A tradition of sacrifice, a tradition of love. Here our school is firmly rooted.







The beauty of its campus clamors to be noticed. The tall trees and gentle blossoms bespeaks her strong committment and delicate love.

The dedication of its faculty seem to indicate a higher calling even than that of education. A direct responsibility to God and his service becomes clear.

Lives given faithfully to education and Christ, in spite of sacrificial living: These are those who gleem with God's mark of approval.

People — Daring to be different. Daring to be new creatures in Christ. The seeking of Truth and the author of it makes us intellectual; the seeking of Life and the giver of it makes us people.

Students- willing to interact. Willing to become involved in each others' lives. Willing to learn and be taught. Students willing to give of themselves make ENC dynamic.

The world around us

We look, we smell, we feel, and yet somehow we fall short. We never really have time to enjoy our surroundings. Still, we cannot escape them. God's love evidenced on every side.

All Together — What do we have?

We speak of sacrifice, of dedication. Our lives tell of abundant life, of beautiful surroundings, of purpose.

Soon memory will pad the facts and we will lose the vivid reality of ENC. We can recount the events, retell the tales, but something is still missing. Perhaps here lies the clue to the reality of ENC.

Experience. Experience is the essence of ENC. Like a road . . . unending . . . ever upward. So it is.

The Telling Of A Year

Always unique, always special. To the students, to the faculty, to all those who share in our microcosm, there are those events that make our year what it is.

But how do you confine a year's worth of memories to mere language? A picture may well be worth a thousand words, but can even a thousand words adequately express the thoughts, the feelings, the emotions of a time, now past, in our lives?

The events pictured are more than history. We were there; we breathed the air of that time. Only we can understand the things held within these pages. For we realize that these pages only come to life as we mix our own spirit with them. Then, together, these pages can speak to us.

Come then, come share again some of those times that helped us build our memory world. Come on a journey of the mind ... of the heart ....

Orientation

SEPTEMBER 5

Learning names and faces, of which there are many, seems to be the emphasis of Freshman Orientation. Your roommate, advisor, R.A., student-to-student counselor, R.C., administration, etc., must all be remembered; not to mention the various buildings on campus. It's a never ending week of meeting people and places and learning what is expected of you.

Registration

The day we found ourselves standing in registration line was the day we realized that we were back at ENC. It seems that every year registration is a time of waiting, borrowing pens, waiting even longer, seeing Mrs. Brown and smiling at friends or for pictures. Registration line is just the beginning of a year full of standing in line; lines for meals, paychecks, water fountain, spook walk, showers, chapel . . .

All-College Outing

The first all-college event of the school year is the outing. Houghton's Pond is the traditional location of this oversized family picnic. Tug-of-war games, and the throwing of unsuspecting freshmen into the pond seem also to be a part of the tradition. The freshmen won the tug-of-war this year; however, mass seemed to play a major role in their victory.

The dinner line finally ended, and the sun set on many cold, damp, weary, but happy smiles.

Rush Week

Rush week is the name given to that group of days where people do anything and everything to accomplish one thing: snare the evasive freshmen. This activity could be anything from serious acting and music to simple slapstick comedy or just plain sick jokes. Whatever the method, by the end of the week, either Sigma, Kappa, Delta or Zeta has convinced them to join their side.

Skating at Norwood Roller Rink always proves to be an enjoyable occasion for the ENC community. This year was no exception for the most part. A good number of people turned out to support the Junior Class. Everyone had a good time with the exception of Sarah Grace and Craig Wheeler, who went to the skate at the cost of an arm and a leg. The space to the right is dedicated to the memory of the unfortunate duo's unbroken arms and legs.

Heritage Day 1978 was a day to re member ... for once. Dr. Edwar Mann, former president of E.N.C., de livered quite an enjoyable address t students, faculty, trustees, an friends. Dr. Mann recounted some c

Let it not be for present use

Let it be such work as our descendants

'See, this our fathers did for us'."

HOMECOMING

The crowning of queen Lois Andrews by reigning queen Colleen Belle, highlighted a weekend full of exciting events. Many alumni gathered again on campus to relive fond memories. There was no disappointment.

Varsity sports were at their best, with big wins in Soccer, Volleyball, and Cross Country. The defeat of King's College in soccer was especially impressive.

The presentation of the musical "Fiddler on the Roof" added to the general spirit of the weekend. The casts efforts were rewarded with continual sell-out crowds.

"FIDDLER ON THE ROOF" SOLD OUT FRIDAY & SATURDAY

Since "Fiddler" is sold out for Friday and Saturday evenings, we are appealing to students and local people who could attend the Monday or Tuesday night performances at 8:00 p.m., to exchange their tickets so that visiting alumni might see the performance on the weekend.

Spook Walk

The boys of Third Floor Memorial once again presented their annual "Spook Walk." The event began with the delivery of pumpkins and invitations to each floor of the girl's dormitory. Later that evening, a hearty bunch of youth went "pumpkin carolling," continuing the publicity for the next day's event.

Except for a small fire, the evening went as smoothly as planned. Each person in attendance was scared delightfully out of his wits, and inspiteof a chain saw massacre, all escaped with their lives.

Pep Rallies

Twirp Week
Twirp Auction

We had pep rallies this year . . . something we haven't had for awhile. The cheerleaders set a few up for soccer, and the turn outs were good. It was nice to be able to get involved and support the team

The soccer team and student council put on skits and they weren't that bad (maybe a little overacting) but okay in general. Apathy is slowly being beaten back.

Twirp week, however, wasn't quite as popular this year. Maybe the idea of TWIRP (The Woman Is Responsible to Pay) is on the way out. Some girls think that they shouldn't have to ask guys out, because guys never ask girls out at ENC . . . I guess they're right.

The Twirp auction was fun. Stafford is the best auctioneer around. I can't believe those girls paid so much to go out with those guys.

Fall Revival - H. B. London "Refreshing..."

God Bag

"One measure of success is the influence that one person can have on others. For the last week, H.B. London has proved to be a radiant influence of God's light and truth. When asked what he was expecting the student body to receive from the revival, he said, " ... that the students recognize their potential in Christ and then grow into it."

H.B. London's transparency and candor were used by the Holy Spirit to convince, challenge, and correct the spiritual posture of the ENC community. For a few days, we as a community were able to experience the influence of a modern-day prophet who proclaimed the vivid truth of the Lord." — Sam Mountain, reprinted from the Campus Camera.

Fall Revival surely was special this year. For once we had a speaker who spoke right to our needs. It was great just to sit back, to listen, and to learn. "Refreshing ... "

Motorcade-Life-Encounter

NOVEMBER
Etc

Seven weekends a year, the ENC campus is invaded by MONSTER CADERS, or so they're called. Motorcade is a special tradition here at school. It means different things to different people.

To some it means seeing their brothers and sisters from home. In many of those cases, it also means care packages. This is one reason why motorcades should never be abolished. But, to others it means extended periods of work, mostly clean-up. Dorms, offices, grounds all must be in tip-top shape for the possible students. "I Care" day was conceived from this basic idea. Some students resented the double standard that existed between days of visitation, and days of non-visitation. Hypocrisy was their cry. But then, who messes their house up when company is coming? Motorcade (Excuse me, Life Encounter) does seem to be a hassle, occasionally, but I guess it's worth it.

Christmas Variety Show

The Annual Stuco Christmas Variety Show was a real success this year. "Step Into Christmas" was the title of this year's version. Appearances by Kevin Doolittle, Second Floor Spangenberg, and Ralph Montilio are among those not pictured here.

A special point of interest was the Christmas tree, donated by a local merchant, and then declared unsafe by the fire marshall.

Christmas Chapel

The Christmas Chapel was especially beautiful this year. Groups performing this year were: A Cappella Choir, ENC Singers, Concert Band and Brass Ensemble. From the prelude by the Brass, to the carols sung together at the end, music filled the Lahue Center an interesting change from the normal sounds of the gym.

Last year, the A Cappella Choir was treated to confetti and ping-pong balls at the end of their part of the chapel. This year, however, the confetti was found before the chapel started.

As always, the highlight of the event was the lighted Christmas tree formed by the members of the choir.

The Christmas Chapel always promises to be among the best of every fall semester.

Finals Week - Thursday To Wednesday

Pixie Sister Party

Freak Out

DECEMBER

Following the Christmas Chapel, a unique time period begins. It is known as Finals Week. Finals week was split up this year to accomodate the Christmas weekend. Finals were scheduled from Thursday to Wednesday, leaving an open weekend in the middle. AWS and AMS took advantage of this and provided some activities to relieve tension. The Pixie Sister Party for the girls, and a Freak Out in the gym for everyone were enjoyed by many. In broom hockey, Diane Padusis beat one guy who asked to remain unnamed. Second Floor Spange gave a Command performance at the Pixie Party to the ammusement and amazement of the girls.

As the week progressed, more and more people left for home, and by Wednesday morning, virtually no one was left on Campus. It was odd seeing only four people on the floor, when usually there were thirty to beat to the showers. By the afternoon, however, it was vacation time for all .... Relaxation at last!

JANUARY 13

About 75 students participated in a skating party sponsored by the Junior Class at Shea Skating rink in Quincy. Evening entertainment was performed by Diane Padusis who fell no less than 37 times. Her act was followed by Bob Berry and Milton Peter Carey III. It was an evening of fun and laughter for all; broken bones were not a result of this acitivity.

19 JANUARY

Friday, the music dept. was proud to present a Junior recital by Debbie Cox (Soprano) and Delores Moser (Alto). The girls performed several traditional solo numbers, then teamed up to present a delightful scene from the opera Hansel and Gretel. Choreography and costuming made the rendition especially enjoyable. Both girls displayed excellent control and stage presence. This was a worthy opening to the recital season.

King's Tournament was close this year. It was a new feeling not being sure of ourselves. For the last two years we entered the final game with the tournament already in our pockets. This year, after the final game, we still did not have the tournament in our pockets.

ENC beat Messiah by a margin of 26 points, the closest in recent history. If Messiah had outplaced the Barbershop Quartet, they would have won the tourney. However, you can also say if Lalone and Underwood had not come through, and if the Women's Volleyball team had not won, the outcome also would have been different.

It certainly was an exciting tournament. The Basketball team provided three great games of hoop. All participants did their very best. Art Oakes, our replacement bowler was superb. Dave Troxler fought hard in chess. Each fan yelled his loudest. The Dean was proud ...

The cheer that ended the tournament is appropriate: "ENC is the very best, and don't you forget it!"

Special Classifications

At Eastern Nazarene College several special groups of people exist. Among them are the Music Majors, and the Graduate students. Music requires a five year program, and therefore, reclassifies these students. Herein lies those of our number who exist in Limbo, waiting for their time to come.

This year's soccer team, with a record of 11-4-1, did an outstanding job of representing the school on soccer field. After an exciting homecoming victory over undefeated King's College, the Crusaders found themselves one game away from the NCCAA national playoffs in Tennessee.

However, a heartbreaking loss to Barrington College in the finals (1-0) meant waiting until next year. Still we say, "Great job, guys!"

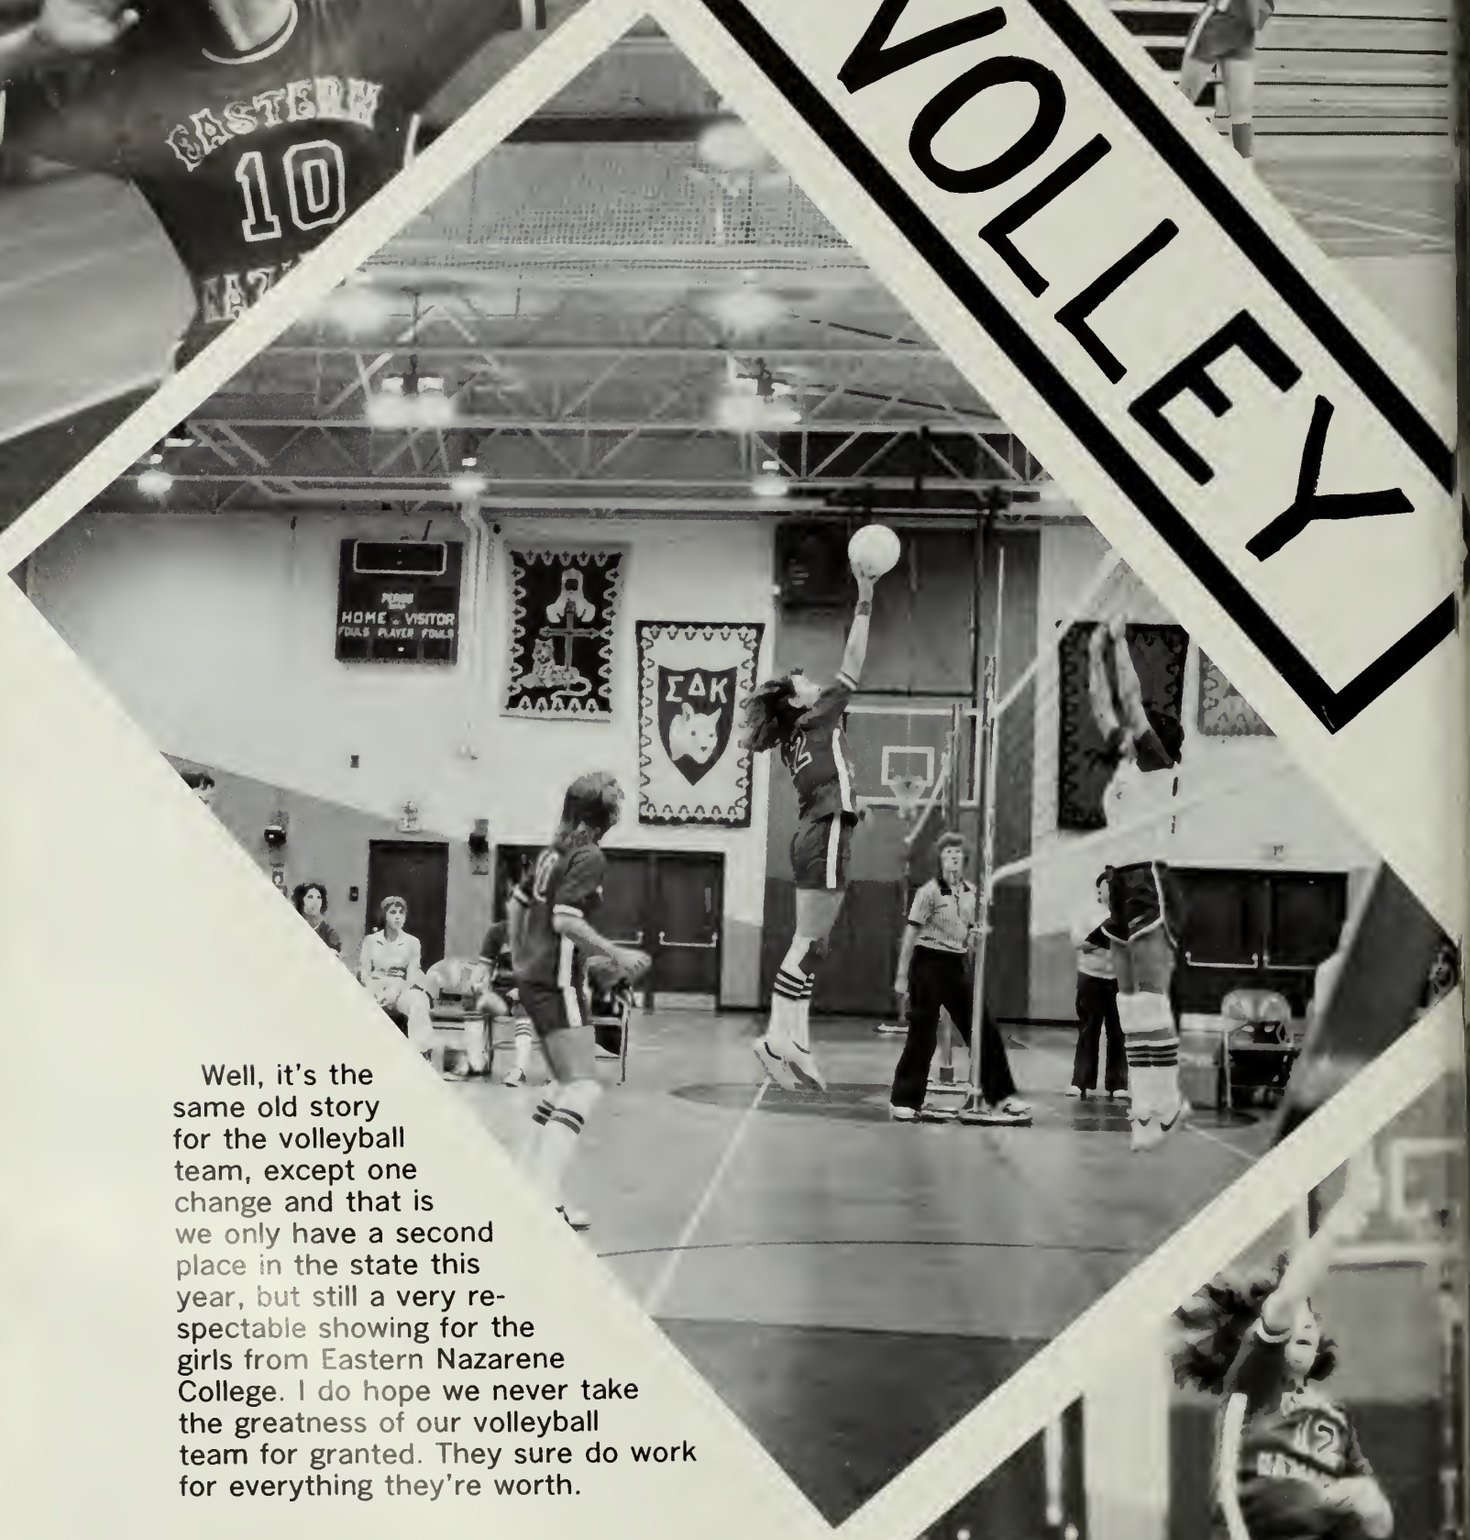
VOLLEY



Well, it's the same old story for the volleyball team, except one change and that is we only have a second place in the state this year, but still a very respectable showing for the girls from Eastern Nazarene College. I do hope we never take the greatness of our volleyball team for granted. They sure do work for everything they're worth.

Volleyball is a momentum game. Lose the momentum and you lose the match. It was unfortunate that only four (4) home games were scheduled this year. It was even more unfortunate that only four (4) fans showed up at the State Finals. In spite of spectacular effort by our girls, I guess E.N.C. didn't want their girls to win badly enough. Sorry.

enter college as mere Freshmen, striving to grow into mature upperclass students. We hope our developement is evident to those we meet, it certainly is to us. Someday, when we are mature and finally grown, we'll look back to our stages of developement, maybe to laugh, maybe to cry.
Still maybe that day of maturation, that final day of growth, will not ever come. What then is our goal?
Simply to be maturing should be enough.

There is no way you can put out a newspaper every other week at E.N.C. But it says right here in the catalogue ... The Campus Camera: The Biweekly college newspaper ...
No way. It's just not done anymore. But it's not a newspaper if it doesn't ...
Forget it. It can't be done.
But isn't it suppose to ...
Wrong.
But .. but ..

They said it couldn't be done. Not enough help, not enough money, just plain not enough. They were right .. about the not enoughs, but we proved them wrong about the being done part because we did do it. The little help we had was quality help ... help that made it possible to put the Campus Camera out every other week this year ... 16 total issues. Yes sir, they were wrong 'cause we did it.

NAUTILUS — There is a sign on the wall off the office that describes the routine very well. The sign simply says, "Hill."

Publishing the book before commencement was extremely difficult. I am not sure it will happen again in a while.

Still, we did it. It was worth the extra work. Money is scarce, we'll end up in the hole the way we started, but we did capture the year. Its finest and its darkest moments are all to be found herein. I guess that means we won.

I hope it does.

Student Council, as an organization, seemed to be active this year. Meetings were well attended and a special interest in the welfare of the student body was evident. The council was involved in several different areas of student life.

The gameroom was perhaps the council's largest accomplishment. Electronic games such as "Circus," "LaMans," and "Baseball" were popular favorites. Foosball, however, was in a class of its own. This game brought both prestige and honor to the gameroom, to the students as well.

Constitution revision, WENC reckoning, Film Policy, Security Enforcement, Student Fees, "What's Happening", Bulletin Boards, Publications Board, Food Committee, Trophy Case, King's Committee, Coffee House; all these were topics for conversation in this year's council.

Some would say that Student Council's most important additon is Foosball. We'll have to wait to find out for sure.

The memory is an interesting thing. Items that seem so perfectly obvious and unforgetable soon fade from our minds. Who would think that they could forget who their roomate was this past year? Is it possible to forget the name of your major professor? Or even the name of your R.A.? Even if you do remember the name, will you be able to remember which year was which?

Because our memory is so short, we'd like you to participate in a little exercise with us. Please take a pen and fill in the details of this page. The "Munro" Doctrine

Chapter 12

It had been a long, long Saturday and as I sat on my bed listening to the normal rowdiness in the hall, I knew a good night's sleep would be just the thing I needed to make my Sunday great. My roommate and I talked awhile and both of us crawled into bed, looking forward to eight hours of uninterrupted sleep. Unfortunately, it was not to be. We were in for one of the wildest nights of our lives!

It seemed as though I had just drifted off to sleep, when I heard my roommate yelling at me to get out of bed. I couldn't understand what was going on. She was pulling curlers out of her hair and putting her shoes on. I couldn't seem to wake up and I kept asking her what time it was and what was going on.

"Can't you hear the dumb fire alarm? Come on, we've got to get out of the building!"

So, I dragged myself out of bed and stumbled around the room looking for some shoes and a coat. We made our way downstairs and out into the snow. The cold air hit me as I came down the steps and I finally woke up. Someone told me it was 2:30 a.m. I couldn't believe it! We all stood huddle in the snow as the firemen came and turned the alarm off. As we went back into the dorm, I heard someone say, "Well, things could be worse . . . we could have had two alarms!" She spoke too soon!

I had drifted back to sleep after that brief interruption, when I was rudely awakened by my roommate yelling at me again! This time, I was even slower to wake up.

"Grif, will you come on! You've got to get up!"

"What for? Why are you taking your curlers out of your hair again?"

"Because the dumb fire alarm is going off again. Now get up!"

This time I woke up enough to look at the clock. It was 3:30 and sure enough, the fire alarm was screaming. So, back downstairs and out into the snow. Since I was just a bit more awake this trip, I looked at the girls as they came out the door. Now, I don't know how many of you have seen some of these girls at 3:30 a.m., but believe me, we must have been some sight! Between the curlers, blankets used as bathrobes, nightgowns hanging from under coats, and just plain weird outfits (like jeans under a nightgown, with a coat over top and fuzzy blue slippers to make it interesting!) we were a sight. We would have made a great picture. As we stood huddled in the snow, the firemen came and turned the alarm off. Then, back upstairs we trudged, to fall into bed one more time.

"Well, Brenda, at least now we should be able to get some sleep. I certainly hope it stays quiet for awhile." I should have known better!

I was just warming up and falling back to sleep, when I heard that ever-familiar blast from the hall. I turned over to glare at the clock. It was 4:15 a.m. Brenda looked at me in disbelief. One more time we climbed out of bed, pulled on shoes and coats and traipsed outside. By now, the crowd headed outside had thinned considerably Frankly, I can't say that I blamed them, I wanted to stay in bed too. After all, there's no big thrill in getting out of bed 3 times in one night; but then again, there's no excitement in lying there wondering if I'll be cooked for breakfast! So we stood in the snow, (which was falling harder now) and watched the usually placid firemen as they turned the alarm off. They were complaining quite loudly that this was their third trip in one night. Boy, if they thought their third trip was bad, they should have asked me how I felt about leaving a warm bed three times. Finally the alarm was turned off and we started back into the building. As we went in I heard one fireman say, "Well, three strikes and we're out. This has to be it for the night!" I only wish he had been right.

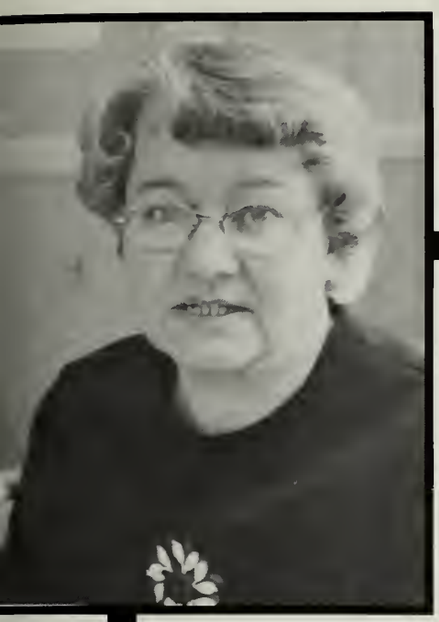
This time when we went upstairs, we reset our alarms. Somehow, we figured the Lord would understand if we skipped Sunday school this once. We finally crawled back into our beds and turned off the light.

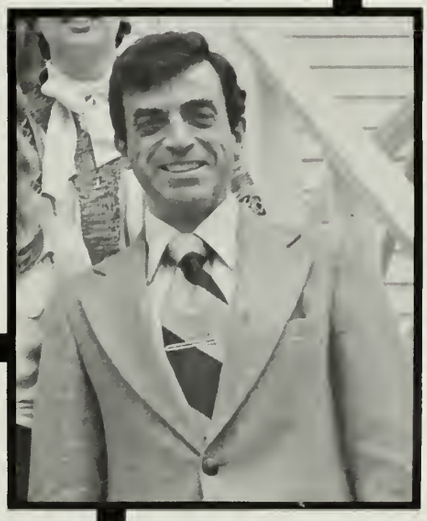
I know it couldn't have been five minutes before that rotten alarm was screaming again. It was absolutely incredible! It was also 4:45 a.m. I was really getting mad! So was my roommate! We grabbed our coats and slammed the door on the way out.

And as mad as I was, the firemen were even madder. It was snowing pretty hard by now and we stayed in the parlor for 10 minutes waiting for the firemen to come. They eventually got the alarm turned off and sent us back upstairs at 5:00. For the fourth time, we pulled off our coats and shoes. Brenda was pretty upset, and when she pulled her shoes off, she threw them across the room. I turned off the light and collapsed into bed. The night seemed like it had been 13 hours long. But at least now we could get a little sleep; I thought. I was wrong again.

I know I was asleep when I hit the pillow. Unfortunately, I hadn't been on the pillow very long when I heard IT once more. I almost screamed! I look at my clock to discover I had been in bed for 14 minutes it was 5:14 a.m. I didn't think I could make it out of bed one more time. I threw my pillow hard enough to put a hole in the wall(well, almost). Brenda was upset about the alarm, but she was really ticked when we couldn't find her shoes. I really hadn't been watching when she threw them. I found one behind the T.V. and she found one under her desk. So, it was back downstairs to the parlor. This time when the firemen came, they threw us out. They also went upstairs and cleared the building. By the time we all got to the Student Center it was close to 5:30. There were girls sitting everywhere. Most of them were pretty grumpy, but some of us were awake enought to act sillier than usual. We sat and laughed while everyone else tried to sleep. After almost half an hour, the firemen came and yelled at us about hitting the alarms. I wasn't anymore excited about waking up 5 times than they were about coming the fifth time. So, we plowed through the snow back to the dorm. This time when we got back to the room, we both threw our shoes! I didn't care if the alarm went off 5 more times, I was going to sleep! Thankfully, we were done for the night.

We slept peacefully for the next 3½ hours and when we got up to face the day, the whole ordeal seemed like a dream. A BAD, BAD, BAD, dream!





Administration
Faculty
Staff

It is a privilege to be associated with the student body of Eastern Nazarene College. Our graduating seniors were freshmen when I assumed the responsibilities as president. We have come through four years together. I believe the relationship of student and administration has been strengthened in each succeeding year. The reason for this has been a common desire to cooperate and make these years the best possible.

The opening of each school year is always interesting to me — getting acquainted with students and meeting parents. Then comes the flood of activities following the pattern of the previous years — yet distinctively different from all others. It would be difficult for me to choose one season or one activity as my favorite. It seems that whatever sport is current, whether it be soccer, basketball, baseball or cross country, that is what I enjoy most. (But honestly, winning the King's Tournament three times in succession did have a particular thrill all of its own.) Every revival speaker seemed to be God's man for that particular time. Special chapel series, dormitory Bible studies with faculty, and the annual Missionary Blitz brought new truths and depths to our spiritual development. The outstanding social event is, without a doubt, the Junior Senior Spring Banquet. That's the time when many boy-girl relationships that might have semi-private become apparent to a president who isn't always current on who's dating whom. So often, as Mrs. Irwin and I learn of the engagements, I notice an approving smile from my wife, along with the comment, "I'm glad." We both are glad. Good relationships are formed on the campus of Eastern Nazarene College.

Commencement is approached with mixed feelings. It seems each year that we graduate our best, most talented students. Then next year there is another class, equally talented, ready to graduate. Personally, I feel that graduation is one of the high peaks of the year. The problems (and there will always be problems) are forgotten, and with "seeing eyes" I envision each graduate becoming a leader in some local church, in some particular community, and in some chosen profession. After all, this ENC's assignment — to develop leaders.

It is a challenge, as well as a privilege, to be president of ENC. The best in education and the best in Christian service is our long standing heritage. As today's culture continues to become more secular in nature and more permissive in ethical matters, it becomes more difficult to maintain a high level of spiritual values on our campus. We have structured chapel attendance, courses in religion, and a Christian life style on campus. But as fine as these requirements are, there is no guarantee that spiritual and human values are transferred to the students. Much credit for the high level of academic and spiritual achievement at ENC belongs to our deply — committed faculty. The key, however is the quality of students who come to ENC. You that are here know as well as I do that your choice to come was not because this school was necessarily cheaper or more convenient. You came because you knew ENC was an excellent liberal arts college and a community in which spiritual values mattered. I congratulate you on your decision and your perserverance. I am grateful for the privilege of knowing you. I predict great achievements for each one of you.

Dean Young

The poet John Ciardi wrote a piece for the Saturday Review a few years ago (on the occasion of his resignation from a faculty position to take up full time editing and writing — I might add, at better pay to boot) in which he remarked pointedly "Education is too important a business to be left to deans."

After one makes all due allowances for poetic license and the unreasonableness of professorial opinion about administrators, Ciardi's remark makes more than a little sense. The practice of the decanal arts can only at best make it possible for education to take place. In the interest of achieving this high hope academic administrators fiddle with the curriculum, struggle with the budget, tinker with the schedule, plead for grants and keep a weather eye cocked for a professorial talent, wherever it may be found.

Christian higher education at Eastern Nazarene College for this dean, then, all comes down to the faculty member engaged in the high calling of teaching. The dean's task is to attract, maintain, provide support for and otherwise serve a faculty selected for its professional competence and Christian commitment.

One wonders what might be the effect should ENC require every student to transfer for one semester to a large impersonal university, say in the sophomore year, and then come right back to finish at ENC. The experience might well be expected to confirm in ENC students' minds that we have assembled here to serve the students of ENC a truly outstanding faculty, offering great strengths to be used in education of students academically, socially, personally and spiritually. Christian higher education at ENC is too important to be conducted by lesser figures, and this administration proposes to allocate resources and make decisions in the light of such a commitment.

Donald L. Young
Academic Dean

Dean Helfrich

It is, presumedly, our position that the primary function of Nazarene Higher Education is not simply to help students find jobs, or to train them for technical skills to fill narrow occupational niches when they graduate, but rather to find meaning in their total lives through their studies, their work, their play, their worship, their personal relationships. Victor Frankl believes that there are three ways individuals find meaning in their lives:

1) By what they give to the world in terms of their creations

2) By what they take from the world in terms of their encounters and experiences

3) By the stand they take to their human predicaments

Thus, meaning is what human being invest in the world by way of values, attitudes, feelings, and viewpoints. Student development personnel are in a special position to help students discover meaning in their lives because we meet them in more diversified educational settings than others. We are not constrained by subject matter as many may be. When the surface is scratched and we probe more deeply we discover that many students are confused, scared, angry, anxious, and uncertain about their lives. What are we attempting to do about it.

A. Continual Refinement of Student Affairs As a Learning Reinforcement System

1. General groupings of activities
   a. Academic Support Programs (counseling, advising, learning assistance, i.e. tutoring, peer counseling)
   b. Recreation and culture (Athletics, recreation programs, concerts, lectures)
   c. Residential and food programs
   d. Career advising, placement, and various counseling support program.
   e. Physical health and safety operations.
   f. Student activities and campus governance
   g. Campus conduct administration
   h. Research and needs assessment

B. How does Student Personnel implement this learning reinforcement program?
1. Collaborates with students and faculty colleagues to assess student needs, to meet and identify barriers to student learning
2. Participates in the development of the learning environment, including educational programs and support services; administration of essential support services
3. Clarifies rights and responsiblities and, in light of changing needs and conditions, maintains a system of governance and order as well as a means to redress grievances
4. Assumes responsibility to maintain a healthy community that is responsive to changing needs and conditions; helps insure that students are able to participated in aspects of the setting which affect them
5. Plain "deaning" — being the persons to call upon when trouble brews or help is needed

To contribute in these areas Student Personnel must be much more than a "manager of Services," and a "controller of behavior;" fundamentally, they must be policy strategists, evaluators, agents of change, and authorities on human development as well as effective administrators of programs and services — mentors, and models upon which others may depend. We, in Student Personnel strive to show the individual student his powers and how with the right use of those powers he can live a life of honor.

Biology

"O God, grant that in so far as one mind can be of strength to another-that the prayers of the department can bring understanding and healing power to conflicts with which we must struggle in order to gain understanding."

The study of biology can provide a rigorous yet imaginative type of thought that is of value in all walks of life. The philosophy of the department strives to provide a balanced program which will enable the student to develop his potential academically, socially and spiritually.

All courses and research opportunities are designed to permit the student to test his limit academically. During this year, two biology students have been recipients of highly competitive research appointments, namely, an American Cancer Society Research Fellowship at M.I.T. and a Michael Reese Research Fellowship at the University of Chicago, Pritzker School of Medicine. Locally, two students participated in biomedical research at the Harvard School of Public Health and Beth Israel Hospital Center for Research. Additionally, eight students received junior research appointments with the National Marine Fisheries Service, Woods Hole, Massachusetts, Each senior will present a seminar based upon his research experience. All upperclass biology majors are members of the American Institute of Biological Science. Extensive majors are members of the American Institute of Biological Science. Extensive literature search and off campus seminar attendance are required of all majors.

The Beta Phi Mu Biological Society coordinates the social and spiritual aspects of the department. Bi-monthly bible study-share sessions are held in the homes of the biology faculty. Frequent informal get-togethers, the Mt. Katahdin climb, numerous field trips, swim party, November fish fry, off campus seminars followed by discussion, help sessions, seminar room, scuba, January in the Bahamas, cooperative preparation for G.R.E.'s, M.C.A.T.'s, D.A.T.'s, the Outstanding Senior Award, and the consistently positive force on third floor Shrader are all relived through skit and film at the end of the year departmental banquet.

Music

Music is an integral part of our lives - spiritually, intellectually, socially. Take away music for a day and our lives would be greatly deprived. Man expresses his deepest thoughts and longings through music.

At ENC, the music department strives to awaken a deep appreciation for the joys of musical involvment by participation in ensembles, taking private lessons, or by attendance at various concerts and recitals. In addition, the department offers a highly competent program of instruction for students who aspire to a professional career in music.

Since ENC is located in the Greater Boston area, musical oppurtunity for both amateur and professional alike are multiplied many times over. Perhaps these are some of the reasons why the music department continues to be one of the strongest departments at ENC. - RJH

Sociology is the study of social life. The social causes and resultant consequences of human behavior are important aspects of this discipline. Sociology's subject matter extends from the family to the mob, from crime to religion, and from the divisions of race and social stratifications to the shared elements of a common culture. Few fields have such broad scope and relevance.

The study of sociology at ENC is designed as an exciting experience which will equip qualified graduates to proceed to graduate school, or to a career in federal research, or teaching.

The companion discipline of social work is also under the umbrella of this department. ENC social work alumni now hold distinguished positions in public, private and sectarian agencies in greater Boston and other parts of the U.S.A.

In both of the disciplines of sociology and social work, it is the aim of this department to search for truth. We really believe that there is no conflict between the best in Christian faith and the best in scholarship. Therefore we seek to understand, study, and serve man under the guidance of the Man who said,

Chemistry

Chemistry is a door into the world God has created for us - giving insight into the nature of our world - its colors, its softness and hardness, the freezing of water, the strength of steel and stretchiness of rubber, the odor of perfume or food, the chemistry of the human body - insight into the constant changing of things based on the changeless qualities of the fundamental atom and molecule - giving greater awareness of the endless variety in the things in nature and of their relation to the basic order in the universe, an order which flows from God himself.

Chemistry is a door through which man brings improvements for his living conditions - a medicine against his ills, a better fabric to clothe himself, a more durable material for his shelter - many ways to meet his needs - taylor-made polymers for new plastics, sensitive methods to detect hazardous materials in his environment, materials to repair a damaged human part - tools for man to help himself.

Chemistry is a door to service through which chemistry alumni walk to serve their God and fellowman - as a doctor in Texas, a researcher in chemical industry in Beacon, New York, a teacher in a Long Island high school, a customer assistance manager in Michigan, a college professor in Ohio, a Federal Food and Drug chemist in Baltimore, a missionary doctor in New Guinea, a food Chemist in Massachusetts .....

Congratulations to the class of 1979. Thank you for letting us show some of you these doors. May God bless you as you walk through the doors He opens.

I write these words on the evening of February 26. The day has been long; I am tired. The fact that I am tired is typical. I look back over the time that I have spent so far as Editor of of the Nautilus. I think of the rewarding moments, and I think of the moments of frustration. I believe the moments of frustration far out number those of the rewarding nature. Still I am grateful for the opurtunity of putting together a yearbook, your yearbook.

If I had to remake my decision to run for the editorship, I would decide the same way.

I want to thank some very special people. It's trite to say that without their help, there could be no Nautilus. In some cases, this is true, in others it is not.

My Photography Editor, David Kilpatrick, is one of those for whom the cliche is true, perhaps is understatement. David, THANKS! Others that helped greatly were Ruth Griffin, Bill Nichols, Cindy Mengle, Kim Vandervort, Brenda Briggs, Chuck Hodsdon, and Joy Burt. The photographers, David Blaney, Lori Cohey, Anne Raudsepp, Sharon Knox, Dale Ball, Evan Kincaid, Joel Cure, and Deb Crowl deserve special mention.

The artists on the staff, Jeff Howe and Kathy Shevel added a special touch to the book. Special thanks to them. Special. The word is over-used already and I have not exhausted my list.

The following folk are those that have given me the emotional support to be able to endure the office. I sincerely believe that theirs is the most signifigant contribution to the book. Dean Helfrich . . . Thanks for your words of encouragement, for your faith in me, thanks for your willingness to help. Mr. and Mrs. C. Raymond Whitney . . . Mom and Dad . . . Thanks for your continual support, for your unquestioning trust, for the depth of security I have as your son. Nancy Cove . . . Thanks for your love.

It has been an experience, and yes I'll say, a privilege to serve as your editor. I wish the job on no one, and yet I wouldn't trade my experience for anything. Interesting, isn't it?
